NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICER CANDIDATE COURSE

MISSION OF THE NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICER CANDIDATE COURSE

"To develop selected personnel to be Infantry Non Commissioned Officers at the fire team and squad leader level who will be capable of performing duties appropriate to their grade in infantry units as combat leaders."

The Non Commissioned Officer Candidate Course at the United States Army Infantry School is a period of transition, training, and leadership development for selected enlisted men who have demonstrated leadership potential, which prepares them to assume the increased responsibilities of a Non Commissioned Officer.

LEADERSHIP REACTION COURSE is a test of leadership potential and ingenuity. The Course is designed to require the Candidate to exercise leadership traits in solving situational problems, thereby providing him and the instructor with a basis for identifying and improving his personality weaknesses.

Each Candidate is given the opportunity to be the leader of his team. He must analyze the situation, formulate plans, and then direct the accomplishment of his mission within a specified time.

The Course involves land and water situations and there are times when the "most obvious ways" are "dampened"

EXPERT WITH THE TOOLS OF THE PROFESSION

As in any profession, the skilled worker has certain "tools of his trade". For the Infantryman the tools are many weapons which vary from small caliber to the larger sophisticated types. During weapons training the candidate learns not only how to fire, but the mechanical characteristics and capabilities of individual weapons as well.

Proficiency is the key to handling all weapons organic to Infantry units. As a potential squad leader, the candidate must learn to operate and be able to teach his men the steps necessary to maintain proficiency. Without such knowledge the tools of combat are useless.

THE NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICER CANDIDATES 71ST COMPANY

The sergeant, as the platoon Tactical NCO is the one individual who knows the candidate best; and, therefore, will exert most of the influence in developing his leadership ability. The specific mission is that of developing a spirit of aggressiveness, stamina, discipline, and leadership in 25 to 40 candidates as individuals, so they will be capable of performing the duties of non-commissioned officers. The Tactical NCO must observe, correct, evaluate, counsel and render written reports on each candidate.

REFLECTIONS ON THEIR EXPERIENCE

The attaining of professional knowledge enables the candidate to successfully assume the duties of a Non-Commissioned Officer upon graduation. Thus, one of the principle duties of each candidate is to study, understand and retain the instruction presented. Study time is alloted each evening to allow for preparation of the next day's classes.

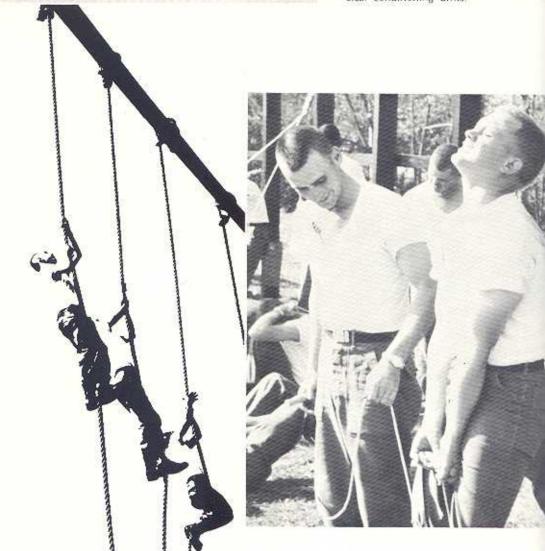

STRENGTH,
STAMINA, AGGRESSIVENESS . .

The essentials of combat leadership are learned through a variety of physical conditioning drills.

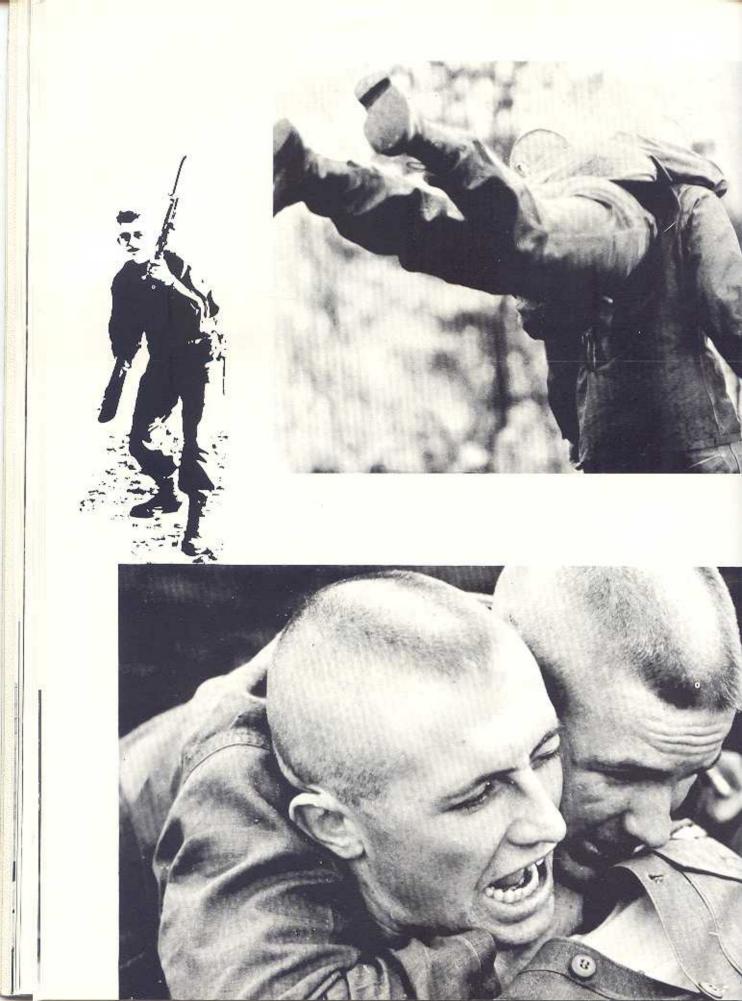

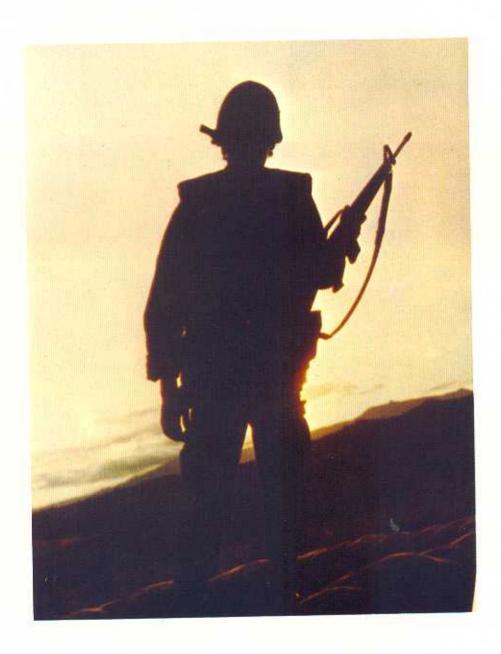

SELF CONFIDENCE AND DETERMINATION . . .

the Physical Compact Training Program. Many hours are spent in the sawdust pit learning the finer points of hand to hand combat. On the bayonet field practical experience is acquired through blade on blade exercises. The physical strength of one individual over another is not essential, but rather the finesse of executing correct oftensive and defensive movements. The final graded test for endurance is the physical combat proficiency test. The physical training received by the officer candidate not only strengthens him physically, but also strengthens him mentally to better enable him to cope with the rigors of combat.

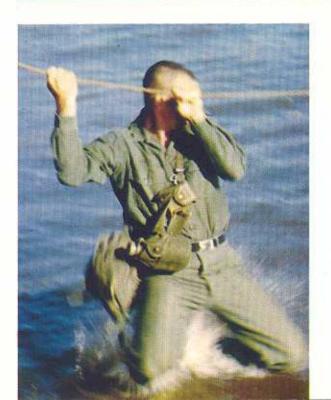

The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena, whose face is marred by dust, and sweat, and blood . . . Who knows the great enthusiasms the great devotions, who, spends himself in a worthy cause; who at the best knows in the end, the triumph of high achievement, and . . . if he fails, at least fails while daring greatly, so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who know neither victory nor defeat.
